Larry Brown is an expert Speaker. His practical workshops and group coaching sessions focus on collaboration, productivity, communication skills, interpersonal dynamics, and optimizing performance. Larry is dedicated to promoting organization cultures that are based on trust, and where people thrive at work.

Larry has over 25 years of learning & development experience in the legal and technology industries and is known for his practical and engaging workshops, his empathetic listening, and his confidence-building approach. He has built high-impact corporate universities using customized learning solutions and innovative approaches. A highly-rated and sought after workshop leader, Larry has a track record of boosting audience skills and helping them implement what they have learned.

Larry graduated from Princeton University with a Bachelor of Arts in History. He is an advisory board member for several professional development companies serving the legal community, and he co-chairs the Professional Development Consortium's Technology & Innovations Committee and its San Francisco Bay Area local group. A past Board member of the PDC, Larry is a 2019 recipient of the Richard Pearson Award for his innovative spirit, demonstrated commitment to teaching and mentoring, and life-long love of learning.

Outside of work, Larry has actively participated in several non-profits that promote historical education, youth development and community-building.

When not working or contributing in the non-profit community, Larry enjoys spending time with family, and cheering on his favorite sports teams. A Philadelphia-area native who still appreciates a great cheesesteak, Larry and his California-born wife are long-time residents of the San Francisco Bay area where they have raised seven children, all of whom they home-schooled.
