Kelly Peace is a seasoned speaker and coach with expertise in empowering high-performance individuals to achieve their best. Kelly has over 25 years of experience in professional services and most recently served as Global Director of Brand, Marketing & Communications for EY's talent function, engaging 400,000 employees in over 150 countries.

For the last decade, Kelly has supported and partnered with her coaching clients to grow and evolve with confidence in a way that is truly unique to them. She is known for her ability to meet clients where they are in their career and help them work more effectively by integrating key productivity, collaboration, mindset and wellbeing strategies.

Kelly excels at simplifying complex issues and executing with innovation and creativity. In addition to her coaching work with teams and organizations, Kelly works with individuals around the world, helping them develop successful habits to thrive at work.

Prior to EY, Kelly held key marketing and communications leadership positions at Ogilvy Renault (now Norton Rose Fulbright) and Accenture.

Kelly holds a BA from Queen's University and a post-degree certificate in Public Relations from Humber College. She is currently enrolled in the Co-Active Training Institute Certification program and will obtain her CPCC and ACC credentials in 2025.

Outside of work, Kelly enjoys hiking and spending time by the water with her family. She resides near Toronto with her husband and two teenage children.
